Inversion of the Subject

The 12 components of the English sentence are:

Subject + Verb + Object

But to express emphasis the order of the subject and the verb is reversed:

Verb + Subject + Object

⚡ When certain words/phrases expressing emphasis (negative or single verb tenses) are placed at the beginning of a sentence to emphasize it, you make the inversion of the subject.

⚡ This structure follows the rules of the INVERTED ORDER (you need to add an auxiliary verb (BE) when there is no other auxiliary (have/has/should/could/would) in the normal order sentence).

Restrictive Expression + Auxiliary Verb + Subject + Verb

Restrictive Expression:

- After expressions with a negative or restrictive meaning such as never, never again, rarely, hardly, scarcely, little, barely, seldom, or twice etc.

My best friend never goes to the gym (never) → Never does my best friend go to the gym.

Example: Never had I seen a person like that → Never had I seen a person like that.
- After expressions with only and so: only when, only by, otherwise, unless, this way, just only, that way, in no way, on no account, under circumstances, on condition, not until, by no means, on no account, at no time, at no time, at no time etc.

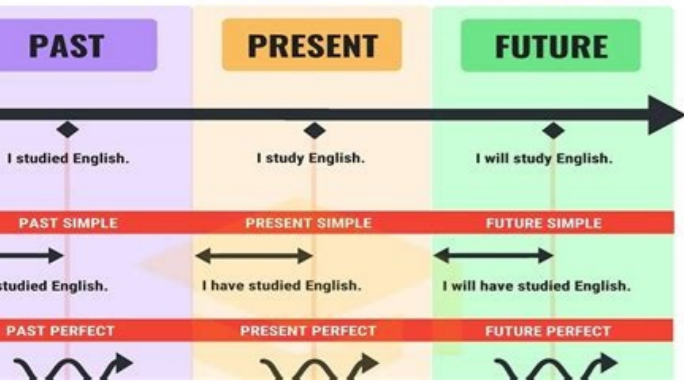

I can't sleep unless I have a glass of water → Unless I have a glass of water, I can't sleep.

Example: Only when I was tired did I go to bed → Only when I was tired did I go to bed.

⚡ Inversion of 'if' in conditional sentences:

If you had studied harder, you would have passed the exam → Had you studied harder, you would have passed the exam.

VERB TENSES IN ENGLISH

Introduction

Retail consists of the sale of goods or merchandise from a fixed location, such as a department store, boutique or kiosk, or by mail, in small or individual lots for direct consumption by the purchaser. Retailing may include subordinated services, such as delivery. Purchases may be made by individuals or businesses. "Retailer" may refer to a person or business that provides goods or services to the general public, or to a person or business that provides goods or services to other businesses, and then sells smaller quantities to the end user. Retail establishments are often called shops or stores. Retailers are at the end of the supply chain. Manufacturing businesses use the process of retailing as a necessary part of their overall distribution strategy. The term "retailer" is also applied when a service provider services the needs of a large number of individuals, such as a public utility, like electric power.

Shops may be an individual store, shopping centre with five or six houses, or in a shopping mall. Shopping centres may be for pedestrians only.

Sometimes a shopping centre has a parking lot and is served by public transport.

Non-physical online retailing, a type of electronic commerce and also business-to-business (B2B) transactions and multi-vendor, are forms of non-shop retailing.
